Three Hundred From Helena Join Grand Parade and Pyrotechnic Display.

of a monster demonstration last night. The enthusiasm and splendor with which the Helena delegation (300 strong) were received was grand and would do credit to Helena or Butte. As the train of five cars pulled into the depot at 9 o'clock the place was lit up like day with huge bonfires ail over, while from a mountain near the town a steady stream of rockets darted into the heavens, which, added to the din of bombs and fireworks of every description and the uproarious cheering of 250 men at the depot, aided by the shouts of the Helena delegation, made altogether a scene of enthusiasm rarely observed. Torches were thusiasm rarely observed. Torches were in readiness for about $00 people, who formed into an immense column, there being rully $50 men in line when the town was reached. Frank Otls led the long procession carrying an immense flag and following nim was the Comet band of fitteen pieces, and this organization of miners rendered excellent music. The march through the streets was rendered more brilliant by the grand display of Roman candles fired off in the long column. When Odd Fellows hall was reached it was already jammed to sufficiation. The stage was appropriately festioned in the national colors, and large portraits of the Hon. J. K. Toole and Major Maginnis stood in front of the stage.

Very few of the Helena 300 were able to gain admittance. John Shriner, member gain admittance. John Shriner, member of the state committee, acted as chairman. As the hour was growing late no time was with after the Comet band played a patriotic air, which was loudly applauded. The chairman introduced H. M. Parker, candidated for county attorney, who made a few remarks and was followed by Peter Breen, candidate for the legislature. Mr. Breen is a bright young man and forcible speaker, and began by paying his compliments to the Boulder Age for not having the courage of its convictions to stand by its insinuations. The speaker said the important issue in this campaign was protection for the workingman and the democratic party is the one to rely upon for that protection. He promingman and the democratic party is the one to rely upon for that protection. He promised it elected to do his best for all classes in Montana. He compared the state candidates, beginning with Carter and Maginnis. At the mention of the latter name there was great applause. He then briefly alluded to his work in the last legislature and the part he took in putting down the scheme to have Pinkerton detectives here, and the prevention of the introduction of and the prevention of the introduction of convict labor. He said Joe Toole was the man to depend upon to save the laboring men from any legislation that will tend to injure them. He spoke of Tom Frezgeralo's (candidate for state auditor) efforts in help ing the Timberline coal miners in their hour of need. He devoted his time and shors to securing their rights for them which every laboring man knows and they will send up a majority for Thos. Fiz geraid that will make the old man's heart will send up a majority for Thos. Fitz geraid that will make the old man's heart teel good. Mr. Breen then reviewed the Jefferson county democratic ticket and urged all to vote for "Dod" Halford for sheriff. In speaking of the legislative ticket, he said the Jefferson representatives would, if elected, help to hare a commissioner of labor appointed; an office which is sativy needed in the new state. He also proposed preventing the establishment of contract labor in the ereckleinschn tion of the new state buildings. When-ever the laboring man needs a defender After Mr. Breen had concluded and the applause had subsided, the chairman anceived. He said he was not there to abuse any one but wanted to tell why he was there and to talk like a gentleman among gentlemen. He assured the republicans present, if any there be, expecting to hear him abuse them or their party, they would go home sadly disappointed. He said some of the best friends he ever had were republicans, but he was sorry for republicans. He said the republicans reminded him of the story of the hay who had a basket of the story of the boy who had a basket of pups and sold one as a republican pup. A few days after the boyer said: "Young man I thought you said that was a republi-can pup." "Well, it was," answered the lad, but it has its eyes open now and is a depuration pup." (land) and is a democratic pup," (laugh ter and applause) and that is the stration to day; the democrats have their eyes then, yes, wide open, and they are all going to vote the democratic ticket. He said republicans were just as good as democrats, but p ditiest differences divided them into won is known as the science of covering the said to the science of covering the said to the science of the said to the science of the said to the science of the said to the said government, and both parties want to adthe democrats are not opposed to a secret ballot nor can you hear of a democrat who says he is opposed to a registration law; but they are emphatically opposed to many of the provisions of the law now on our statute books. It should be mod fied so toat no party will have the power to destranchise any loyal American citizen, and turning to Mr. Breen who was sealed or the stage with many others, he told him to do his part in having that law modified after his election next. Tuesday. (Applause.

Mr. Word grew very eloquent in depicting the urjust incidents where good, old and young, respectable citizens and pioneers who have founded this great territory, who have been disfranchised by that unjust measure and denied the inalienable right guaranteed by the constitution of this govrnment.)

The windows were crowded with people and some on the outside were talking. Mr. Word requested them not to disturb the audience. An old gentleman stepped away from the window and Mr. Word invited him to come inside. The old man said he didn't care where he stood, he was going to vote the straight democratic ticket. Great appliance followed this and the old gentleman was given a seat on the stage. gentleman was given a seat on the stage Mr. Word then went on to tell who the

Mr. Word then went on to tell who the "Big Four" were and hew they blazed the trai", and when the speaker first knew them neither had a cent to buy a drink. This was followed by a brief recital of their great work in helping to build up this grand state of Montans.

He took up the republican phrase and boast, "Carter and protection to American labor." He said he has been educated to believe from the eloquent tongue of Mr. Sheridan that the democratic party composes the laboring and poor men and the rich republicans want to protect them. (Applause.) By this great "protection," the laboring man of the east finds out that after a year's hard toiling, to support his family and educate bis children, after figuring up, that he has just made a living he pauses, thinks, and consults among his co laborers and the result is a strike. The laboring man is wronged and he demands his rights in this way. Why, during the past nine months of Harrison's administration there have been more strikes than tion there have been more strikes than during the whole of Cleveland's adminis-Mr. Word said he was not going to vote for Mr. Carter. That gentleman recently got up at meeting and posed and demanded to know why any Montanian should vote for any of the democratic candidates. It Mr. Word had been there he would give several cogent reasons why he would vote for several candidates on that ticket. He would vote for Mr. Toole because Mr. Toole was struggling for Montana's admission when Mr. Carter was opposing it, and when one bill was defeated Mr. Carter came back to Helena and had himself interviewed, the burden of his story being that "I did it." Yes, he did it, about the same way he settled the Cheyenne Indian trouble and then came back telling people he was shot at, and it was afterwards found out that he got scared at a few hove who he was shot at, and it was afterwards found out that he got scared at a few boys who were shooting off firecrackers (laughter). He eulogized Major Martin Maginnis as a man who was always in the front ranks of legislation at Washington fighting for Montana's interests. He was doing this when Mr. Carter was chasing chickens and ducks in the swamps of Illinois. Major Maginnis name and reputation extends throughout the length and breadth of this country and whose valiant deeds rnd accomplishments will continue to form a part of the history of this territory. Col. Sanders is another man who likes to abuse Major Maginnis. Why? Because the Major made him bite the dust more than once. Major Maginnis Why? Because the Major made him bite the dust more than once. Major Maginnis fought his way in battle from a private up to the highest ranks in the army. Where did "Col." Sanders get his title? Just go and ask him. He never got it in the army; he was not there. (Laughter) The speaker noticed that Mr. Carter said a few days ago that the first legislature of Montana in 1864 put the territory in $250,000 debt. Mr. Word said he remembered something about that, and scorned the boast that through republican management this debt.

through republican management this debt was paid off. Mr. Word then showed the placed that debt upon the people, but he excused them for it. The federal officials were getting $4 per day in greenbacks. In those days gold dust was the only money recognized and a $100 greenback when taken to a bank would not bring more than $40 to a bank would not So that this $4 currency amounted only to $1 60 per day, and he did not blame the republicans for paying the federal officials a little more wages, or enough to live on; and living was very expensive then. He could excuse the republicans for this, but it was mighty small for them to lay it on it was mighty small for them to lay it on to the democrats. The hour was now growing late and Mr. Word briefly spoke on silver and lead. On the latter item he poked much fun at Mr. Carter's manceuvres in Washington on this subject. Mr. Windom has not changed that law and cannot do it; neither can Mr. Carter persuade him do it; neither can Mr. Carter persuade him to do so; nobody but congress can alter that law; nor have any smelters shut down in Montana yet, Mr. Carter in his address before Mr. Windom to the contrary not withstanding. He urged the people of Wickes and Jefferson county to support the entire democratic ticket and they will vote in the interest of good, honest govern ment. Mr. Word then bade his audience good night amidst continued applause.

Roswell G. Horr, a Republican Heavy Weight, Physically, Agitates Montana Air.

Wild Attempts at Humor and a Bur ing Desire to Earn His Retaining Fee.

Hours and Retires Amid Thunderous Applause.

Roswell G. Horr, the budding humorist of Michigan, addressed a large and enthu siastic audience at the opera house las night. Mr. Horr, although young in wit, is along in year . He is fat, florid and ussy. He has two voices, though "one voice for an orator is surely enough." He has a tip tilted nose and William goat beard which is grey except where tobacco juice has left its traces there. His head is round and benevolent looking and his eyes of grey are inexpressive and fishy. His mobile lips have a pucker about the corners such as is worn by ancient maiden ladies at a husking bee. Mr. Horr's linen is not as a rule immaculate, and his lawn tie polish the kitchen stove. His boots bore a second-hand shine, but his trousers fit his plump tether extremities "like the paper on the wall." He displaces a good deal of air by his person and uses up a great deal when he speaks.

While he and a number of the apostles of stating that himself, wife and daughter are well and taking in all the places of note in and around Dublin—Phoenix Park, Four Courts of Dublin, the Great Bank of Ireland, Trinity College and the Donneybrook Fair. Mr. Ryan says that Ireland is looking splendid and as far as he could see there is no want or hard times in the places. Form the east, was playing Boulonger's band which was playing Boulonger's march, and after passing through the principal streets, marched into the opera house amid yells and waving of handkerchiefs. After the noise had subsided Hon. A. J. Seligman stepped to the footlights. He said before introducing the orator of the evening, Roswell G. Horr, he had cheer the places of the places beaux were trudging along in the rear of west, north and south came news of republican gains. He was in a position to know.

The air was filled with victory and it only sained for his hearers to help swell the number of votes by which the republicans would carry the state. He was creditably informed that Choteau county would return a republican majority of not less than eighty, Silver Bow county between 300 and 800, Missoula 200 or upwards, Deer Ledge 200, and if the republicans of Lewis and Clarke county did their duty they would elect a republican legislature and send two republicans enastors to the United States senate.

Mr. Seligman's remarks were received Mr. Seligman's remarks were received with cheers. He introduced Mr. Horr asia gentleman who had been in congress from Michigan, and who had stood shoulder to shoulder with Tom Reed of Maine in their fight for the admission of Montana into the

Mr. Horr needed no further introduction In the probate court, yesterday, the marriage of Geo. Blinn, of Butte, and Miss Anna Breen, of Minneapolis, was solemnized, Judge Howey officiating. Mr. Blinn is a well-known and prosperous young mining man of Butte, who spent several weeks in this city during the last legislative session in the interest of the boner in spection law, he being secretary of the scale to a decent basso profundo, but the reference of the footlights and gave a Chesterfieldian bow. Wild huzzas arose and when finished Mr. Seligman sprang up and proposed three cheers for the grand old man, which were given. As on an other occasion some one essayed a tiger and, as usual, was the only one who yelled. Mr. Horr beeded no further introduction. weeks in this city during the last legislative session in the interest of the boner inspection law, he being secretary of the Montana Society of Stationary Engineers. The happy couple left for Butte on the afternoon train and will give their friends a surprise, as the ceremony was conducted very privately.

At the opera house to night, the citizens of Helena will be addressed upon the issues of the day, by the Hon. T. D. Fitzgerald, Hon. N. W. McConnell and Hon. L. A. Luce.

It is so unctuous, so full of comedy that one for gets that nothing has been said but laughs, more through sympathy, perhaps, than anything else; but he is satisfied. The people laugh. He gains his remains in planissimo voice and tried to slide down the scale to a decent basso profundo, but stuck half way; then he smiled. Mr. Horr's smile causes laughter. It is so unctuous, so full of comedy that one for gets that nothing has been said but laughs, more through sympathy, perhaps, than anything else; but he is satisfied. The gentleman from Michigan was very glad to see so many republican faces before him. He had been in the campaigning business so long he could tell by looking at an audience whether it was democratic or republican. A republican audience a republican what little there was of him. Reasoning by the rule of chance he supposed there were at least three or four democrats in the audience. They were in good company. Here Mr. Horr smiled and the audience laughed. He had been told that he was harsh when speaking of the democrats but he wanted them to make a self examination and see if it wasn't the truth that ailed them. If it was the truth, that was what hurt them a d not what he said.

Two ripples emerged from the corporate of

Two ripples emerged from the corners of Mr. Horr's mouth and ran around the back of his neck and embraced. The audience again laughed.

The gentleman from Michigan pranced up and down the stage and Colonel Fisk kindly removed a robe from out of the way Montana is certainly attracting the attention of eastern capitalists, and within the past few days Messrs. H. M. Jarvis and P. J. Conklin, representing the extensively known financial institution, the many members of congress got up and left their seats. Were there any republicans towards putting down the rebe lion but the party dian't. Come, now, if it did I wish some of you democrats would tell me Whenever there was any devilment going whenever there was any devilment going on there was a democrat behind it. Wasn't there? Again Mr. Horr smiled and the audience laughed. Mr. Horr could save a great deal of muscular energy by having one of his agonistic facial contortions photographed so he could hold up a photograph whenever he felt a humorous spell coming on.

In connection with these matters it may be stated that Messrs. Jarvis & Conklin have made through the Second National bank a purchase of $100,000 of Helena city bonds. There is a paid up capital of one and one-haif millions of doliars of the Jarvis-Conklin Mortgage Trust company.

He wanted to predict that if anybody in this state was sent to the penitentiary for trying to corrupt the ballot-box it would be a democrat. [Loud applause and a smile from Mr. Horr.]

The speaker said the congressmen from

The speaker said the congressmen from the southern states held their seats by about one-third as large a vote as will be cast for one congressman in Montana. That was owing to the republicans down south being disfranchised. The principles of the republican party are that each man shall cast one vote and have that vote honestly counted. He upheid the registration sys-tem and Australian method of voting—the tem and Australian method of voting—the outcome of republicanism.

The gentleman from Michigan grew facetious in taiking about his love for the republican party and the love it had for the old soldier. He paid his respects to Mr. Cleveland for vetoing pension bills and eulogized the old soldier, taking occasion to admit that he, like Cleveland, remained at home while the boys were at the front doing the fighting.
